

This week, stop composing.

Be a reply —
not a ~~draft~~.

Respond to life instead of composing the perfect response that never leaves your head.

Drafting the perfect career move.

Drafting the ideal response to that difficult stakeholder.

Drafting who they want to become — someday, when conditions are right.

And life — the real one, not the rehearsed one — moves on without them.

The philosopher Kierkegaard wrote:

“Life can only be understood backwards,
but it must be lived forwards.”

Most leaders understand this intellectually.
Very few live it.

— Søren Kierkegaard

The courage isn't in the leap.

It's in letting go of the draft.

The leaders who move through transformation with clarity aren't the ones who had the best plan.

They're the ones who trusted themselves enough to start before the plan was finished.

YOUR MOVE

The reply doesn't have to be eloquent.

It just has to be sent.

Ambiguity into clarity. Complexity into action.
